1888 PressRelease - Black Rose Novelist to Take Part in the Anne Rice-Inspired Annual Halloween Conference of Supernatural Authors.

Battle Ground, Wash. - Five-time novelist K.L. Bone will join gothic fiction writer Anne Rice and nearly 20 other supernatural authors, including Greg Wilkey, Sarah M. Cradit, and Alys Arden, at the annual UndeadCon event over Halloween weekend in New Orleans, Louisiana, at the Hilton Garden Inn.

UndeadCon is produced by the Anne Rice Vampire Lestat Fan Club, which was formed 27 years ago. Now in its sixth year, the annual conference features a number of events over four days that allow attendees to hear firsthand from the writers behind top-rated paranormal television programs, radio shows and books. Events include panels, Q and A sessions, a meet and greet, and farewell brunch. Approximately 1,200 people are expected to attend this year's event.

"This conference has such a huge following among fans of supernatural fiction, and I'm honored to take part in a creative gathering that has become an annual Halloween tradition," said K.L. Bone. "Sharing the stage with fellow writers in the same genre - both emerging and established - promises to be an inspiring and exciting opportunity for me professionally, and a fun-filled, engaging event for attendees."

Bone is the author of Black Rose (Volume 1) and the just-released Heart of the Rose: A Tale of the Black Rose Guard (Volume 2), as well as the popular fantasy Rise of the Temple Gods series. During the event, she will be signing copies of her books.
